ISS added to list of 'decent companies'

UNI, THE global trade union, has placed building services provider ISS on a select list of companies which ensure decent working conditions and sustainable development. This list only features 18 companies across the globe.

Representing some 20 million workers around the world, UNI has named ISS as a good example to global employers. Its ceo Jørgen Lindegaard said following the announcement: "We are very proud and happy to be added to the 'Decent Work Companies List'. It is especially important to us because it is the employees' choice. Furthermore, it confirms our belief that it is important to have global standards and our ISS Code of Conduct for our employees."

ISS - which operates worldwide and employs more than 460,000 people in 50 countries - recently entered into a new agreement with UNI over labour and organising rights, which was said to be the most comprehensive and advanced of its kind. This new agreement aims to enable all ISS employees worldwide to be able to exercise rights to union membership and collective bargaining.

The group has also agreed to donate €100,000 annually to a jointly managed fund aimed at monitoring and raising standards in specific markets where current conditions are inadequate.

New Truvox management

UK-BASED cleaning machine manufacturer Truvox International has appointed a new management team as its long-standing managing director - Peter Holt - stands down at the end of the year.

His position will be filled by David Overell, who is currently general manager and has worked with Truvox since 1997. Gordon McVean joins as international sales and marketing director and he will be responsible for planning and implementing sales and marketing strategy. McVean joins from Kärcher UK.

Peter Holt commented on the new appointments: "The future of the company is in capable hands under David and Gordon's leadership. Their combined skills and expertise in commercial floor care will enable Truvox to leverage its current market advantage for continued growth."
